MANAGEMENT PLATFORM FOR PARTICIPATORY PROCESSES IN THE PLANNING OF SMART DESTINATIONS

InnConsul is a citizen participation platform from which any destination can implement and manage its participatory processes. The design is based on developments on Consul, free software that is built and sustained by improvements introduced by companies and institutions.

It enables compliance with various principals of civil governance: participation, transparency, collaboration and citizen empowerment, boosting electronic participation.

It is a space for reflection, dialogue and collaboration between interest groups and allows new perspectives on the object of study to be incorporated into projects, while at the same time promoting learning through debate between participants.

It can become a project management tool shared by different organisations, companies and institutions with their respective independent processes.

The projects are managed with Innovaris acting as administrators, giving permission to other managers to run and monitor the project and participation in it.

The platform features different methodological tools for participation: debates, proposals, votes and projects. Through the functions, characteristics and scope of each of these, as well as the design of the participatory strategy, Innovaris implements and manages each participatory process from start to finish.
